

Press Conference on April 27th 2011

Mahesh Bhupathi named brand ambassador of Candor International School

Ace Indian tennis player Mahesh Bhupathi has been appointed as the brand ambassador of Candor International School, projected to be the country's first Green School. Bhupathi said his role with the institution would be a two-pronged he would be associated with the building of the sports infrastructure at the school and in imparting tennis training to the students through the Mahesh Bhupathi Tennis Academy, which has over 30 centers in the country. Bhupathi on Wednesday welcomed the growing importance given to sports in educational institutions and said it would help in providing a holistic development of a child.

"I would like to see myself involved in more than just the role of an ambassador and a consultant. I would like to support Candor in helping these youngsters to excel in sports, share in the team aspects of sports and become involved in making a difference," the doubles specialist said. Candor School principal, Pradip K Das said for holistic development of students, besides academic excellence, promoting of a sense of physical wellness through active engagement in sports was very essential. The school would also offer coaching in other sports apart from tennis, he said. Speaking on the Green School aspect, Das said the school spread over 20 acres in Electronic city, and has facilities and equipment designed to meet the stringent requirement and standards of Indian Green Building Council. The school has applied for cer-tification, the school's architect said. The school has rain harvesting facilities and has been designed in a way where there would be hardly any need for switching on lights or fans. Solar power has been utilized for any lighting needs. The building materials were those that were environmentally friendly. The swimming pool would be clean using modern technology, sans the need for chlorine. The school has also partnered with SCCIP International Pte Ltd to integrate Robotics Technology into science, art, math's and other subjects to enable students become effective team players and problem solvers.

Moulding young minds...

Befitting its title of the 'Garden City', Bangalore now houses India's first green school. Spread over 20 acres near Electronic City, CANDOR International School boasts of being designed in such a way that it meets the requirements and standards of the Indian Green Building Council. Every attempt is aimed at conserving energy; techniques such as rainwater harvesting, effective disposal of waste and a chlorine less technology for cleaning and maintaining the indoor swimming pool are some of the methods employed. The school was introduced at a press conference and Mahesh Bhupathi was announced as the brand ambassador of the school. Said Pradip K Das, the principal, emphasizing on the goal of the school, "We not only believe in academic excellence but in raising social awareness through authentic community service activities. We believe in the sharpening of moral and ethical conscience through what is taught and learnt." The school gives a lot of importance to the environment and therefore, stands only on 20 per cent of the 20 acres. The class strength is merely 24 with a staff student ratio of 1:10. On choosing Mahesh Bhupathi as the brand ambassador, Pradip said, "We strongly believe that for the complete development of students, the promotion of a sense of physical wellness through active engagement in sports is essential. Hence we have chosen Mahesh Bhupathi, whose company Globosport partners with the school. "Said Mahesh Bhupathi, "Our association with the school is two fold. On one hand, we will help the school conceptualize various sporting surfaces for the different courts. On the other hand, we will have the Mahesh Bhupathi Tennis Academy, which is aimed at spreading the love of tennis among kids."

Mahesh Bhupathi is brand ambassador of Candor International School

Bangalore, Apr 27 (PTI) Ace Indian tennis player Mahesh Bhupathi has been appointed as the brand ambassador of Candor International School, projected to be the country's first Green School. Bhupathi said his role with the institution would be a two-pronged one. He would be associated with the building of the sports infrastructure at the school and in imparting tennis training to the students through the Mahesh Bhupathi Tennis Academy, which has over 30 centers in the country. Bhupathi today welcomed the growing importance given to sports in educational institutions and said it would help in providing a holistic development of a child. "I would like to see myself involved in more than just the role of an ambassador and a consultant. I would like to support Candor in helping these youngsters to excel in sports, share in the team aspects of sports and become involved in making a difference," the doubles specialist said. Candor School principal, Pradip K Das said for holistic development of students, besides academic excellence, promoting of a sense of physical wellness through active engagement in sports was very essential. The school would also offer coaching in other sports apart from tennis, he said. Speaking on the Green School aspect, Das said the school spread over 20 acres in Electronic city, and has facilities and equipment designed to meet the stringent requirement and standards of Indian Green Building Council. The school has applied for certification, the school's architect said. The school has rain harvesting facilities and has been designed in a way where there would be hardly any need for switching on lights or fans. Solar power has been utilized for any lighting needs. The building materials were those that were environmentally friendly. The swimming pool would be clean using modern technology, sans the need for chlorine. The school has also partnered with SCCIP International Pvt. Ltd to integrate Robotics Technology into science, art, math's and other subjects to enable students become effective team players and problem solvers.

'India's First Green School'- CANDOR International School, Bangalore Announced Ace Tennis Player Mahesh Bhupathi as its Brand Ambassador

Candor International School is the first Green school in the country and its outcome. The management believes not only in the pursuit of academic excellence which challenges the intellect but in raising social awareness through authentic community service activities, a sharpening of moral and ethical consciousness through what is taught and learnt and a heightening of emotional sensitivity through the integration of the visual and performing arts." Mr. Das further emphasized the eco-sensitive atmosphere by saying, "The school has been designed to meet the optimum number of 1,110 students and stands on 20 % of the 20 acres. This is in keeping with the requirements of the Indian Green Building Council. The class sizes will remain 24 per class with a staff student ratio of 1:10." On choosing Mr. Mahesh Bhupathi as the brand ambassador of Candor International School, Mr. Das added, "We strongly believe that for the holistic development of students, apart from academic excellence, the promoting of a sense of physical wellness through active engagement in sports is very essential. This why the brand ambassador of Candor is Mahesh professionals with an altruistic interest in education and its outcome. The management believes not only in the pursuit of academic excellence which challenges the intellect but in raising social awareness through authentic community service activities, a sharpening of moral and ethical consciousness through what is taught and learnt and a heightening of emotional sensitivity through the integration of the visual and performing arts." Mr. Das further emphasized the eco-sensitive atmosphere by saying, "The school has been designed to meet the optimum number of 1,110 students and stands on 20 % of the 20 acres. This is in keeping with the requirements of the Indian Green Building Council. The class sizes will remain 24 per class with a staff student ratio of 1:10." On choosing Mr. Mahesh Bhupathi as the brand ambassador of Candor International School, Mr. Das added, "We strongly believe that for the holistic development of students, apart from academic excellence, the promoting of a sense of physical wellness through active engagement in sports is very essential. This why the brand ambassador of Candor is Mahesh

Bhupathi, whose company Globosport partners the school, not just in coaching the children but in the planning, supervising and maintenance of our sports infrastructure." The renowned Tennis Player and the Brand Ambassador of CANDOR International School said, "It's an honor for me to be a brand ambassador as well as the sports consultant of Candor International School. I would like to see myself involved in more than just the role of an ambassador and a consultant. I would like to support Candor in helping these youngsters to excel in sports, share in the team aspect of sports and become involved in making a difference." Candor is also partnering with SCCIP International Pte. Ltd (LS Creative Learning Pvt. Ltd.) to integrate Robotic technology into science, art, math and other subjects so that students become effective team players and able problem solvers. Mr. Kikuchi, Chairman, LS Creative Learning Pvt. Ltd said, "This is the first time we are partnering with an Indian institution. We look forward to this partnership and hope to prepare these young minds with the skills that are needed to make an impact for the 21st century. We are thankful to Candor for providing us this wonderful opportunity." Candor's year round admission policy ensures that all students, who for various reasons have to transfer mid-term, are given the opportunity to join anytime in the school year and are provided with the necessary support in areas of need.